

What's growing on?

In today's learning I want you to really think about the changes in nature that are going on around you. Spring is here, but how do we know that it has arrived?

You will need to complete the following tasks:

- 1) Complete the signs of spring worksheet
- 2) Write a description of the nature spaces where you live.

All work should be completed during your class working time and emailed back to me so I can pop it in your folder!

Task 1

Spring Hunt Checklist

Have a look outside. If you have a garden have a walk around it. If you have a window that you can look out of have a look at the growing areas near to you. Spend some time looking around to see how many of the signs of spring you can see. Check them off as you find them.

daffodil

insect

blossom

seedling

bird

lamb

flower bud

flower

nest

green leaf

What else did you see? Use this space to note down any additional signs of spring that you spotted

Task 2

- After spending some time looking for spring where you are, take some time to describe the outside spaces around you. You could include your garden, balcony, windowsill or the space you choose to take your daily exercise
- Include what you can see, what you can hear and what you can smell.
- You will need to write at least at least three sentences

